Line of Fire/ Pinch Point Hazards

- Reminder, we shouldn't be asking workers to use their hands when a tool will do.
- We must constantly be assessing our activities for where our workers can unintentionally (or intentionally) put part of their body in a position where they can be pinched, struck, cut, or otherwise harmed.
- If this potential exists, we need to assess if there is something that we can provide them to get their bodies out of harm's way.
- Tag lines, material handling straps, clamps, pry bars, dunnage, etc. can all be great solutions to provide our workers better separation between danger and their limbs.
